

Temporary Activities (TEMP)

Introduction

Temporary activities can be musical, cultural, theatrical, recreational, or sporting in nature and include events such as concerts, festivals, parades, sports matches, ceremonies, filming, markets, exhibitions and training exercises. They can often be held outdoors and/or in public places. Temporary activities also include temporary buildings, offices and other structures that are associated with a construction or building project.

Temporary activities and temporary buildings add vibrancy to the district and provide practicality in terms of construction and building projects. However, they can adversely affect amenity values. The provisions for temporary activities provide for activities that would ordinarily require a resource consent, while maintaining amenity values through limits on duration and requirements to restore the site to its original condition.

The provisions in this chapter apply instead of the provisions in the district-wide and area-specific matters chapters except where otherwise specified in this chapter, or in relation to the ~~However, any relevant provisions in the district-wide matters chapters will continue to apply.~~ This includes noise associated with temporary activities, which is ~~managed in~~ subject to the Noise Chapter.¹

The rules in this chapter apply in addition to any traffic management requirements that sit outside the District Plan.
